3.5 Any violation of this Section may result in immediate suspension or termination of access to TryBlaze Wallet, cancellation or delay of transactions, and any other action BCS deems appropriate.

SECTION 4 – WALLET BALANCES AND OWNERSHIP

4.1 TryBlaze Wallet is designed to hold operational crypto balances for authorized BCS operators.

4.2 Wallet balances displayed in TryBlaze Wallet are owned by the applicable authorized operator, subject to these Terms, BCS policies, applicable law, transaction processing requirements, blockchain network conditions, security reviews, compliance reviews, and any restrictions imposed by BCS or applicable third-party service providers.

4.3 Operators are solely responsible for reviewing wallet balances, transaction details, withdrawal information, destination addresses, and other wallet activity before initiating or approving any transaction.

4.4 BCS may maintain records of wallet balances, transaction history, transaction details, fees, withdrawals, and related operator wallet activity for operational, compliance, accounting, security, audit, fraud-prevention, and business purposes.

4.5 Wallet balances may be affected by blockchain network fees, BCS fees, third-party fees, exchange processing requirements, network delays, wallet maintenance, compliance review, security holds, transaction errors, or other conditions outside BCS's control.

SECTION 5 – TRANSACTIONS AND WITHDRAWALS

5.1 Authorized operators may initiate transactions through TryBlaze Wallet, subject to these Terms, BCS policies, applicable law, available balance, applicable fees, system availability, security checks, and any applicable transaction limits.

5.4 BCS does not guarantee that any particular exchange, wallet address, network, asset, withdrawal destination, or third-party service will be available, supported, compatible, or accepted at any given time.

5.5 Operators are solely responsible for ensuring that any withdrawal destination, exchange account, wallet address, network, memo, tag, asset type, or other transaction detail is accurate and compatible before initiating a transaction.

5.6 Blockchain and crypto transactions may be irreversible. BCS is not responsible for losses, failed transfers, misdirected transfers, incompatible network selections, incorrect wallet addresses, incorrect exchange information, operator error, third-party exchange issues, blockchain delays, network congestion, transaction rejections, or other circumstances outside BCS's control.

5.7 BCS may delay, reject, review, suspend, cancel, or restrict any transaction, withdrawal, or wallet activity if BCS believes, in its sole discretion, that such action is necessary for security, compliance, fraud prevention, account protection, system integrity, operational reasons, suspected unauthorized access, or compliance with applicable law.

5.8 Transaction history and transaction details are provided for informational and operational purposes. While BCS uses reasonable efforts to display accurate transaction information, BCS does not warrant that wallet information will always be complete, current, uninterrupted, error-free, or free from delays.

SECTION 6 – FEES

6.1 Fees applicable to TryBlaze Wallet transactions, withdrawals, processing, or other wallet activity may be displayed within TryBlaze Wallet or otherwise made available by BCS.

6.2 By initiating a transaction or withdrawal, you agree to pay all applicable BCS fees displayed or disclosed in connection with that transaction or wallet activity.

6.3 Fees may include BCS fees, blockchain network fees, third-party provider fees, exchange-related fees, processing fees, or other costs associated with wallet operations.

6.4 Fees are subject to change at any time. Continued use of TryBlaze Wallet after fees are displayed, updated, or otherwise made available constitutes acceptance of such fees.

6.5 BCS may deduct applicable fees from wallet balances, transaction amounts, withdrawals, or other operator balances, as applicable.
